Editorial

Once again the Royal and the Green and Gold are over for another year. Students are returning to their original routine and trying hard to fill in all their spare time -- apart from the few who study, of course.

This year's Royal was the eleventh in the history of Macdonald and its theme was "Advancement Through Knowledge". The Royal is one of the best events that Mac has going for it allows the students to enter into keen competition and also permits them to try to do their best to succeed both for themselves and for their respective classes. As Dr. McLauchlan said in his opening speech, "We must always try to put our best foot forward". This was certainly shown in the results of the Royal, for the majority of the people did their very best.

The Green and Gold also involved hard work and competition. The competition, though, is from year to year, and not between the various people. Each year the executive and cast try to improve the show and make it just that much better than the year before. Those involved worked for months ahead of time preparing and rehearsing and putting everything they had into the show to make it a success.

It is events like these which help to build the youth of today into the men of the world of tomorrow. Whether competing for a prize or maybe only for a title, we learn to be a winner or how to accept the loss, while still maintaining a friendly attitude towards the other involved.

Today's generation has a tendency to depend too much on the other person and does not seem to have the same "get-up-and-go" and the ability to get out there and fight for what they want. It is good, therefore, to have events which encourage the students to compete in competition in a friendly, but vigorous way.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor-in-Chief,
Failt-Ye Times.

Dear Sir:

In reply to the subtle accusation of plagiarism in the previous edition of the Failt-Ye Times, I would like to point out that I did not take the advice of a certain professor in the Green and Gold Revue. My editorial and front page, complete with "crest sine crucife", was prepared prior to receipt of Mr. Brokx's article. (A complete list of those people who can verify this statement will be submitted to Mr. Brokx on demand.) This fact renders plagiarism impossible.

The mistake is understandable as Mr. Brokx did mention in his article the predominance of the cross in our emblem. However, history is full of examples of men having similar thoughts simultaneously, especially when they were thinking about the same subject in the same environment.

I exercised my privilege as editor in rejecting the article and passed it to the editor of the following edition as I considered it a valuable follow-up to my editorial. He also exercised his privilege.

I am sorry that this misunderstanding arose and hope that Mr. Brokx will save himself future physical, psychological and financial embarrassment by remembering that verification should always precede accusation.

"Mr. Gardiner"

Last Friday, five diploma students took part in a judging competition at the Showmart Agricultural Show. Representatives from calf clubs and agricultural schools from all over the province took part in the competition. Two dairy classes and one beef class had to be placed with written reasons. Donald McCuat, Diploma '58, received a fifty dollar prize for being the best beef judge. The five Macdonald students were all within the first ten in every class judged.

CAMPUS NEWS

THE COMMENCING CEREMONIES OF THE MACDONALD ROYAL

The Macdonald Royal of '58 has come and gone, leaving behind many pleasant memories of an exciting and fulfilled day.

To officially open the proceedings, Dr. McLauchlan, President of O.A.C., came to the College and brought greetings from Guelph. He stressed the importance of holding these Royals and said that the Mac Royal was, on a smaller scale, the Royal Winter Fair held every year at Toronto. Dr. McLauchlan praised the various booths and congratulated the students on their presentations.

Excitement rose in the crowd as Professor Banting named the new Queen of the Royal, Miss Barbara Channell. The Queen was crowned and presented to her subjects. Her court consisted of the other four contestants who were Miss Rosemary Gray, Miss Beth Hanna, Miss Bonnie Jennings and Miss Edna McCutcheon. The Queen and the Princesses spent the day touring the various exhibits and ended up at the Award Presentations and attended the Green and Gold.

The next event on the program was the announcement of the winning booths. To make the awards, Dr. J. Woodward, President of A.I.C., was there and after a very tough choice Dr. Woodward said the judges' decision gave the first prize to Entomology for its originality and practical value to us. Second prize was given to Agronomy for their timely subject and third prize went to Chemistry. To accept the shield from Miss Barbara Channell, Peter Anastasiades came up as the representative of the Entomology booth.

Miss Phyllis Allen, Vice President of the Royal, welcomed Miss Helen McKercher, Home Economist of the Extension Services in the Department of Agriculture who served as one of the booth judges and who congratulated the different Agricultural options on their fine displays.

The official ceremonies thus ended, and the Royal got underway for another year due to hard work put in by the Royal Committee headed by John Elliot.

FASHION SHOW

One of the highlights of the Royal was the fashion show put on by the girls who have a talent with needle and thread. Lorna Henderson had the show well organized and smoothly run. The girls modelled their own clothes which were created either at home or in their sewing classes. A few of the senior girls even drafted their own models.

As the Junior Prom is coming up shortly, a few of the models gave us a sneak preview of what they were going to wear. Other ensembles included two suits made of two smart Freshettes and some reversible plaid skirts. As the theme of the fashion show was "Fabrics and Textures suited to the various seasons", there were some fine examples ranging from cool summer cottons to wool skirts. The new sack dress was also in evidence to bring the show right up to date in the latest styles.

Marilyn Findley did a fine job commentating and the models were accompanied at the piano by Pam Walsh.

The fashion show was a credit to all those who worked in it and should be a standard event at every Macdonald Royal to show off the feminine talent at the College. It proves what can be done with a limited college budget if one has a little knowledge of putting material together.

HORTICULTURE

One of the most picturesque exhibitions of the day was the flower show. Red and yellow snapdragons lined one wall, while daffodils, roses, narcissus and tulips were predominant among the other flowers. The most spectacular flower was the exotic tropical orchid. A grass border with little marigolds surrounding it added a finishing touch to the picture.

Also on show were different types of tomatoes as well as various other plants.

ROYAL QUEEN

Our new Royal Queen this year is Miss Barbara Channel. Barbara was born in Hamilton, Ontario and after living in various towns, she ended up in Montreal.

Her parents now reside in Port au Spain, Trinidad, which means that Barbara has a real holiday when she goes home.

In 1953 Barbara entered Macdonald to take up Home Economics and she is now in fourth year, majoring in dietetics which involves an internship at a hospital.

Her activities cover a wide range of things. She is director of Publications, vice-president of the Dance Committee, has been in the Green and Gold for four years, and is involved in intercollegiate and interclass sports. Football fans saw her cheering for the old green and gold team for two years.

Macdonald is proud to have Barbara Channel for their Royal Queen.

HOME ECONOMICS DISPLAY

Every year at the Mac Royal there are various exhibitions put on by the students. This year there were some added features which made it almost impossible to visit all the booths therefore it was no wonder that people were frantically running from room to room dragging some poor parent or child.

In the textile room there was an exhibit of various articles made by the girls in the Household Science classes. The Homemakers had a table to show off the dresses and blouses made in their sewing classes. First year Home Economics gave a demonstration of how to use an electric ironer on clothes which normally take a fair amount of time to iron, and the Sophettes gave a display of the care of various leathers ranging from calf shoes, bags to kid gloves. Around the room were model dummies wearing fashionable clothes made by the third and fourth year students and tiny doll models draped in various outfits. Also on exhibit were the knitting and sewing displays and the results of the competitions in both fields. The requirements for the knitting competition was one pair of socks and one apron for the sewing contest. Judges were Miss Cunningham and Miss Jenkins.

A wonderful scent wafted through the building as one approached the cooking labs, due to a demonstration of yeast breads and rolls. Many crowded around to see how to improve their homemade bread and it was a very interesting demonstration. Marmalade making was also on view and proved beneficial to all those who enjoy marmalade spread on bread.

The finalists of the baking contest sold their cakes, all beautifully iced at the end of the afternoon along with the remaining products of the Home Economics demonstrations and many people went home loaded down with Macdonald made products.

Tea was served in the Home Management Apartment in the afternoon, by the Freshettes. Many exhausted and hungry people trudged gladly up the flights of stairs just to eat some delicate sandwiches and sip tea.

Other displays included livestock competitions at the barn, Agronomy seed judging, Poultry judging, Puppet show, Physical Education demonstration and a tractor rodeo.

By the end of the day everyone had sore feet but it was unanimous that the Macdonald Royal of '58 was a great success.

BOOTH DISPLAY

Each Macdonald Royal has exhibits put on by the various options in the fields of Agriculture, Household Science and Institute of Education. This year was no exception, and there were some very fine booths put up in the Men's Gym. The theme this year of the booth display was "Advancement through Knowledge".

The first prize in the booth competition was taken by the Entomology option and showed advancement in living comfort through knowledge of fly control. This booth certainly merited first prize and was of general interest to all those who viewed it. It showed how, in just a few years, there has been an advancement in different methods of getting rid of those harmful and pesty insects who invade our homes each summer.

Second prize was awarded to Agronomy with advancement in knowledge and management of slopes for greater return. There was a comparison between fertile soil and poor soil resulting in failure of crops in the poor soil and a wealthy return in the fertile one.

Chemistry received third prize with their exhibit of nitrogen and nitrogen fertilizers. Fourth prize was given to Animal Husbandry with their booth of poor and good grade meat. With this exhibit there could be clearly seen the difference between the Grade C beef and the Grade A, which is due to proper feeding and management to bring in more profit. Poultry showed a booth dealing with turkey advancements and one of the main interests was the turkey in the cage and it was called a Chick-nik. A delicious looking turkey looked so appealing to the hungry crowd as did those turkey sandwiches.

Other booths included Plant pathology which dealt with diseases on logs and branches; Agricultural Engineering with a booth on advance in machinery, Institute of Education with the development of a child, Horticulture, Bacteriology, Handicrafts, Household Science and General Agriculture.

The booths proved to be very colourful and educational to all those who saw them and the theme was very appropriate to show "Advancement through Knowledge" in the different courses taken at Mac.

Award Night

After the excitement of the Royal had slowly died down, the prizes were given out the same night in the Assembly Hall, before the performance of the Green and Gold.

THE MACDONALD ROYAL

This year's Macdonald Royal certainly proved to be outstanding in many aspects, especially the livestock show.

Keen interest was shown throughout as each student did an excellent job of fitting and showing his animal.

During the day, classes of sheep, beef and dairy cattle, and swine were shown with winners being picked in each class. At the close of the afternoon the winners of each class competed against each other and a championship showman was chosen. This year's champion showman was Rollie Ness, while the reserved showman was Paul MacDonald.

An added attraction at this year's livestock show was the three beginner's classes. This proved to be quite interesting and they must be complimented on the way they performed.

The results of the classes were as follows:

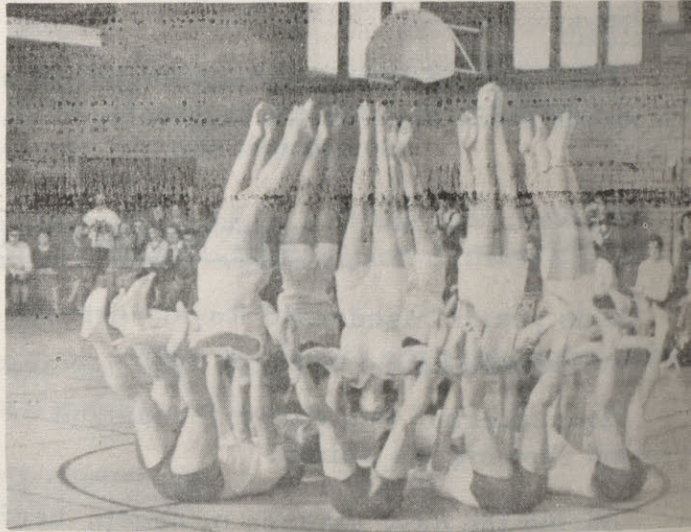

Class 1: Ayrshire Senior Heifer Calves.

1. John Thompson, Agr. 3, New Glasgow, N.S.

THE GREEN AND GOLD REVIEW

The Green and Gold Review of 1958 is at last over after months of writing, rehearsing, and directing. This year's title was "Hell and the Hallowed Halls" and told the story of a college dean who traded his soul to the devil for a chance to become famous and to become every girl's dream boy. He had a passion for Rock and Roll and became a success overnight. He remained every girl's idol until he fell in love and, by means of a Rock and Roll contest with the devil, was able to return to his normal self.

The acting was excellent for the most part and the singing was also good, although there were a few weak points. These, however, were not any fault of the music and choir directors. Special recognition should be given to Lionel Spector and Bob Powers who did excellent jobs of acting and also to Flora Bowden and Eric Armstrong. We must not forget, of course, Bob Cecil, who was a big hit with his Belafonte-like singing.

A big hand should also be given to the executives who did so much to produce such a tremendous show, especially Art Fulford, the producer, Marily Anderson, the associate producer, "R.D." Hamilton, director and script writer, Beth Hanna, musical director, Piera Salama, choreographer, Campbell Taylor, choir director. Script writers, Ray Smith and "Mo" Lamb also deserve special mention. The lighting, under the direction of Colin Nelson was very effective -- especially the dances under the ultra-violet lights.

I think that all of us will agree that this year's review was one of the best ever put on and that all the months of preparation certainly paid off.

Comments heard:

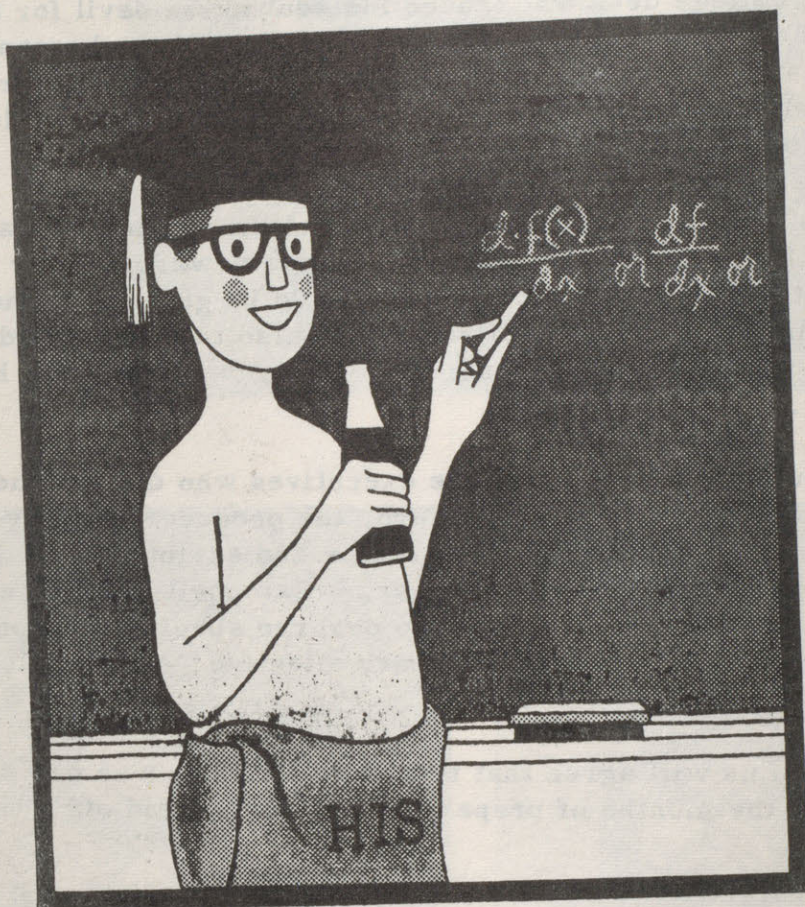

"Best show ever."

"I certainly enjoyed it. All those concerned certainly deserve a great deal of credit."

"After seeing it four times, I can honestly say I enjoyed it more every time."

"Much better than last year's. The singing and acting was tremendous."

"That boy who played Elvis was sensational."

SPORTS

MEN'S SPORTS

Intercollegiate Hockey

In their second game against R.M.C., Mac was defeated by a lopsided score of 12 to 3. Although Mac kept pace with the team from Kingston, they lacked scoring punch and defensive ability in their own game. Due to the absence of Harry Cullen, through a shoulder injury, Keith McCleary was moved up forward where he played a strong, steady game. Goal getters for Mac were Dick Huggard, Keith McCleary and John Day.

This week, the team will play against Loyola, Sir George Williams and Bishops, but by the time this paper is out, the hockey season for Mac's intercollegiate team will be over.

Intercollegiate Basketball

The Green and Gold team travelled to Bishop's Friday, the 21st and were handed their second defeat by a score of 47-40. They then went to Quebec to play Laval, and won by a close margin of 66-63, with the winning basket coming in the final seconds of the game.

In both games, Carrier and Lambert were high scorers for Macdonald, Carrier scoring a total of 36 points and Lambert a total of 41 points.

For the basketball team the regular season is over and the play-offs are coming up. The team gave a fine year's performance winning 6 out of 8 games. Mac scored a total of 529 points and had 456 points scored against them. Carrier scored a total of 159 points and Lambert 165.

Congratulations should be given to the Basketball team for its fine performance.

Curling

The Inter-Club Curling Bonspeil was started on Sunday. The results of the first round were as follows: the teams competing for the consolation are skipped by Apedaile, R.D. Hamilton, Bill Ness, Rollie Ness, John Bryden and Mac Edwards, and for the finals, Bill Baker, Bob Hill, Lynn Hooker, Jack Robson, John Allen and Bill Stewart. The second round will be held on Sunday, March 9th.
